

Reynolds offers a variety of coaxial and multiple pair transient limiters. Each is designed to provide lightning protection to the individual customer's requirements. The coaxial transient limiters can be designed using a variety of connectors. Circuits are available using gas tubes or hybrid circuits. Should circuit requirements change, component parts can easily be changed. The multiple pair transient limiters can be designed for use with grounded pair or balanced pair lines. They also feature hybrid circuitry where required by the application.

